

Acknowledgments

1. The Web of Knowledge

A Roman World

A Roman World

Knowing Nature in the Roman Context

Overview

2. Nature, Gods, and Governance

Divinity and Divination

Roman Virtues

Nature and the Legitimation of the Republic

A Ciceronian Contradiction?

Knowledge of Nature and Virtuous Action

Fabulae versus Learned Observation

Conclusion

3. Law in Nature, Nature in Law

Laws of Nature

Natural Laws

Human and Divine Governance

Is a “Law of Nature” Even Possible in Antiquity?

Divinity, Redux

Conclusion

4. Epistemology and Judicial Rhetoric

Theory-Ladenness and Observation

Observations as Models

Observational Selectivity

Examination of Witnesses

The Natural Authority of Morals

Declamation and Certainty

5. The Embeddedness of Seeing

Doubts about Vision

Mechanisms of Seeing in Antiquity

The Eyes as Organs

Not Every Black Box Is a Camera Obscura

Epistemologies of Seeing

The Centrality of Experience

6. The Trouble with Taxa
 - Knowledge Claims and Context-Dependence
 - Unproblematic Facticity
 - Problems with Experience
 - The Lab Section of the Chapter
 - The Question of Worlds
 - Epilogue
 7. The Long Reach of Ontology
 - Four Kinds of Justification for Prediction
 - Predictability and Determinism
 - Physical Solutions to Determinism
 - The Cascading Effect
 8. Dreams of a Final Theory
 - Explaining the Cosmos
 - Orbs, Souls, Laws
 - Numbers in Nature
 - Harmony and Empiricism
 - Conclusion
 9. Of Miracles and Mistaken Theories
 - History as a Problem for Realism
 - Quantum Magnum PI?
 - Can We Avoid the Problems History Poses?
 - First Strategy: We Have Something They Didn't
 - Second Strategy: The Curate's Egg
 - Other Ways Out
 10. Worlds Given, Worlds Made
 - What's in a World?
 - Kuhn's World
 - What Good Is Relativism?
 - Coherence
 - Truth and Meaning
 - Realism, Coherence, and History
 11. Conclusion
- Appendix: Lemma to the Mirror Problem
- Reference List
- Index